

Refugees in Lebanon

The small country of Lebanon currently harbors around 1.8 million refugees. Many of these refugees are children. These children can only go to school in Lebanon if they receive financial support. Only one quarter of the refugee children have the financial means to go to school. You can help the children where they are by sponsoring them.

Syrian refugee children in Lebanon are often denied the human right of education – missing documents or lack of money hinder them from entering public schools, and rob them of a chance for a better future.

When you invest in education for Syrian refugee children, you make it possible for them to learn how to read, write and calculate – even in their situation of war and displacement. Developing their potential is a major investment in the future of these children.
